THE ORGAN.

The Organ's soft pealing—
Its rapturous roll,
Full of deep feeling
Moës on my soul.

This calm Sabbath morning
It bears to me
A chiding and warning
Thoughtful to be
Now gently, now sadly,
Now lightly, now gladly,
It steals o'er the spirit,
Soothingly bearing
Unto the despairing
A bliss to inherit.

Now joyfully sounding
In deep tonesounding,
The spirit surrounding
With heavenly features,
Rapturous, dreamingly
Holly seeming.

God's purest creatures,
Gently descending
Sensibly sing to us,
Mildly ascending

Crowns of peace fling to us.

Now solemnly, loudly
They burst in air,

And sternly and proudly
Sentence they bear.

Rising in volumes
Like rolling thunder,
When Earth's strong columns
Are buried under.

Thunderously breaking,
Wondrously quaking,
Till Sin, his bonds rearing,
Seems wretchedly, bearing,

In peaks high ascending,
Its domes never ending,
And wild, doth bear,
In its look, the evil

Of the pictured devil
In his despair.

A chiding and warning

Thoughtful to be,
This calm Sabbath morning.

It thus bears to me.

Our future existence

That makes us subsistence

Of which we are taught,

That the earthless spirit

From God doth inherit

May give us thought.

Slowly but ceaselessly
Holy or pecclessly

Go we on ever,

Fate weaving shrouds for us

Waiting for death from us,

Death's dark river.

What may the fate be?

Eternally toiling,
Truth ne'er despising,

Go your way ever;

Fate weaving shrouds for you,

Waiting with clouds for you,

On death's dark river,

Shall, unto God dutiful,

Point the way,

Where the infinite beautiful

Dwelteth alway.

A CASE OF CONSCIENCE.—Friend Broadbribem, said Zephaniah Stratford, to his master, a rich Quaker of the city of Brotherly Love, "thou canst not eat at that leg of mutton at thy mountaine table to day."

"Wherefore not?" asked the good Quaker.

"Because the dog that appertained to that son of Belial, whom the world calleth Lawyer Foxorax, hath come into thy pantry and stolen it—yea; and he hath eaten it up."

"Beware, friend Zephaniah, of bearing false witness agains thy neighbor. And see, it was friend Broadbribem's dog even Pinchon."

"Upon what evil times have we fallen!" sighed the horridus secretary as he went to his way to his neighbor's office. "Friend Grifey," said he, "I want to ask thy opinion."

"I am all attention," replied the scribe, laying down his pen.

"Supposing, friend Foxorax, that my dog has gone into thy neighbor's pantry, and stolen there from a leg of mutton, and I could tell him by name what ought to be done?"

"Pay for me, then, what thou hast lost."

"Know then, friend Foxorax, that, even though the dog doth denounce Pitchon, bat stolen from my pantry a leg of mutton, of the just value of four shillings and sixpence, which I paid it for in the market this morning."

"O, well, then it is my opinion that I must pay for it," and having done so the worthy friend turned to depart.

"Tarry yet a little, friend Broadbribem," cried the lawyer. "Of a very I have yet farther to say unto thee. Thou owest me many shillings—let us be done."

"Then, verily, I must pay thee, and it is my opinion, I have touched pitch, and be定了."
